mZ130019080019QQihZ003QQcategoryZ31681QQtcZphotoQQcmdZViewItem Retail for $94 Exactly how tactical is it to put all the stuff that actually breaks paint (tubes, snaps) along with a handy-dandy shoot me here on this hard plastic sign over the left breast? I mean, this is only half tactical. It is overpriced, but it isn't black.

actually i have this vest and like it very much. our team uses these and we find them very helpful. believe it or not, balls tend to bounce more than break when hitting this vest. the rap4 emblem you refer to is velcro and is removed. the velcro behind the patch has mollie slots behind it so mollie gear is easily attached (in several other places as well). every pod pouch, tank pouch, is also velcro so they can be removed and/or replaced with other items or turned in any manner you wish. also compatible with many military type items if your hard-core milsim player. we only paid 50 bucks for our vests though (for us fat guys. the smaller guys got theirs for 40 bucks) so i agree it is over priced there. but believe it or not they are really nice items for woods ball players to have.

Where does it say tactical must be black? I have been on a lot of different real world teams and not all wear black. As a matter of fact a lot of them wear camouflage and such. They just wear a type of uniformed apparel that makes it easier to differentiate them from others while providing some sort of protection. So again what is Tactical? (^.^_Hardtime_.^.)

apparently, tactical is black :-P It's late, so I'm going to go with that definition. ;) Mariska Hargitay wore a tactical dress to the Emmys, and look, her costar Christopher Meloni is wearing a tactical tux!

When you look at the difference between a regular gun and the tactical version, usually the only difference is that the tactical version is painted black and costs twice as much. Jeff Cooper started it, I think, with this: - - - - - As an amateur of semantics, I am increasingly annoyed by the use of the word tactical as an adjective to apply to everything from fishing tackle to potato soup. Some people obviously believe that if you paint anything black, that makes it tactical. Perhaps if you paint it red it would become strategic. I once did a little book called Fighting Handguns for Petersen Publications. Perhaps it is time to redo the pictures and captions and retitle it Tactical Handguns. - - - - - (For those who don't know, Jeff Cooper is kind of like the Bob Long of gunfighting.)

Only because someone in an army said it had to black as part of an assault team uniform, the style has continued with the misconception that tactical style's have to be black, but you wouldn't see black as a piece of kit in a desert conflict as it would stick out like a sore thumb. Obviously for a night assault, night ops would use black for cover like the Navy SEALs or the SAS. Actually, black-black almost never appears in nature, and sticks out like a sore thumb, even at night. (Black widows are one of the exceptions, and they pair it with red BECAUSE it sticks out.) Real operators on night ops tend to wear dark greys and dark urban camo.

I have even seen one with golden sparkles. Maybe he got the wrong example? LOL. (^`._Hardtime_.'^` ) <http://geocities.com/arcticjohn88/arcticjohn88>
