
military surplus clothes Military surplus clothing, any experience?

Posted by Rita Berkowitz - 2008/09/14 07:06

Now I am thinking about getting into it, buying stuff from the military and selling on ebay. Does anyone have any experience with it? What's good, bad and ugly about selling it? I met some guy recently who reports doing very well with clothing. I am somehow leery about it, afraid that I would deal with dried vomit, spend a lot of time per relatively inexpensive items etc. Check eBay for like items and scope out the competition and how well the items are selling. One more spoon in the pot might be a waste of your time. Rita military surplus clothes Military surplus clothing, any experience?

=====

Posted by Don Lancaster - 2008/09/14 07:06

I have been selling military surplus electronics and various electrical stuff for years. (thanks Don). It has been fun and profitable. One area that I have been avoiding is selling milsurp clothing, coats, boots etc. Now I am thinking about getting into it, buying stuff from the military and selling on ebay. Does anyone have any experience with it? What's good, bad and ugly about selling it? I met some guy recently who reports doing very well with clothing. I am somehow leery about it, afraid that I would deal with dried vomit, spend a lot of time per relatively inexpensive items etc. i Military surplus clothing was an unmitigated disaster for us. We ended up giving most of it away after a year pissing around with it. The first big issue is that there are different sizes available and the sizes you have never match the sizes of your buyers. Also, the mil size numbers on female skirts run about four or five below everybody else.

=====

military surplus clothes Military surplus clothing, any experience?

Posted by Gazoo - 2008/09/14 07:06

I have been selling military surplus electronics and various electrical stuff for years. (thanks Don). It has been fun and profitable. One area that I have been avoiding is selling milsurp clothing, coats, boots etc. Now I am thinking about getting into it, buying stuff from the military and selling on ebay. Does anyone have any experience with it? What's good, bad and ugly about selling it? I met some guy recently who reports doing very well with clothing. I am somehow leery about it, afraid that I would deal with dried vomit, spend a lot of time per relatively inexpensive items etc. i Military surplus clothing was an unmitigated disaster for us. We ended up giving most of it away after a year pissing around with it. The first big issue is that there are different sizes available and the sizes you have never match the sizes of your buyers. Also, the mil size numbers on female skirts run about four or five below everybody else. Thanks Don. I have over 200 100% positive feedback, and do not want to deal with pissed off buyers. i I don't mind dealing with pissed off buyers, but I do not want to be the one to piss them off. :) buck military surplus clothes Military surplus clothing, any experience?

=====

Posted by Don Lancaster - 2008/09/14 07:06

Now I am thinking about getting into it, buying stuff from the military and selling on ebay. Does anyone have any experience with it? What's good, bad and ugly about selling it? I met some guy recently who reports doing very well with clothing. I am somehow leery about it, afraid that I would deal with dried vomit, spend a lot of time per relatively inexpensive items etc. The only ugly I can think of is some potional terrorist may buy them on eBay and try to sneak into millitary compound.

=====